

Welcome to Psychological & Educational Testing Specialists. While our practice has a new name, our commitment to helping individuals understand how they learn—and how they can succeed—has remained the same. Together we bring decades of experience in educational and psychological assessment, working with children, adolescents, college students, and adults.

Every person learns differently. Some students seem to breeze through school, while others work twice as hard to achieve the same results. Some adults have spent years wondering why certain tasks feel more difficult than they should. Often, these individuals are bright, capable, and hardworking—they simply have never fully understood how they learn best.

At Psychological & Educational Testing Specialists, we believe that an evaluation is about much more than identifying a diagnosis. It is an opportunity to discover strengths, better understand challenges, and develop a meaningful roadmap for success.

Many of the individuals and families who come to us share similar stories. Parents may have noticed concerns for years but weren't sure where to turn. Teachers may comment that a child "has so much potential" or "works harder than anyone else." Others seek answers because of concerns with attention, executive functioning, reading, writing, mathematics, anxiety, or standardized testing.

We also work with college students and adults seeking a better understanding of lifelong learning differences or documentation for accommodations on standardized tests, graduate school entrance exams, or professional licensing examinations.

We understand that pursuing an evaluation can feel overwhelming. From the initial consultation through the feedback meeting, we strive to make the process welcoming, collaborative, and informative. We take the time to answer questions, explain results in understandable language, and provide practical recommendations.

As we continue to expand our practice, we are excited to launch this blog as another way to support our community. In future posts, we'll share practical information about learning differences, ADHD, dyslexia, executive functioning, anxiety, 504 Plans, IEPs, testing accommodations, and other topics that help individuals reach their full potential.

Whether you are a parent with concerns about your child, a college student seeking accommodations, an adult looking for answers, or a professional searching for a trusted referral resource, we are here to help.

Thank you for visiting Psychological & Educational Testing Specialists. If you have questions about whether an evaluation may be helpful, we invite you to schedule a free introductory consultation. Together, we can uncover strengths, identify challenges, and create a path toward greater confidence and success.

Psychological & Educational Testing Specialists

Helping children, adolescents, and adults understand their strengths, overcome challenges, and reach their full potential.